In the Front Matter it might be better to leave the even page blank without any statement saying it is intentionally blank. In the Body (your story) of the book any blank pages might have the statement 'This page intentionally left blank' at the top and centered. Not required, but without that statement readers may construe you didn't edit. And KDP seems to frown on blank pages, especially consecutive blank pages.

Chapter Title

[Text begins here about 3 spaces below title; however this can vary. Font used in this template is Calibri 12, but you can choose different font and font size.

Please note that the indent is 0.2 rather than 0.5 which is standard for a typewriter. On a computer, especially the internet 0.2 is recommended.

The Chapter Title and all succeeding chapter titles should be Heading 1.]

TEXT GOES HERE – a brief bio about writing career.

This is the End Matter. Aside from the Review page and Authors page, you might want to consider a page to list the books you have written. Not necessary if you have only written one book. But it is good advertising to list all the books you have published on a single page.
